There is a growing consensus among scholars that the 1990s were a period of significant change in the world economy, with the emergence of a new global order. This period was characterized by the end of the Cold War, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and the rise of new superpowers. The global economy was also shaped by the rapid growth of emerging markets, particularly in Asia and Latin America. These changes led to a more integrated and competitive global market, with increased trade and investment flows. The 1990s also saw the rise of the Internet and the digital revolution, which transformed the way we live and work. Overall, the 1990s were a period of great uncertainty and change, but also of great opportunity and progress.
